The Want of a Reliable Diuretic

Which, while acting as a stimulant of the kidneys, neither excites nor irritates them, was long ago supplied by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. This fine medicine exerts the requisite degree of stimulation upon these organs, without producing irritation, and is, therefore, far better adapted for the purpose than unmedicated excitants often resorted to. Dyspepsia, fever and ague, and kindred diseases, are all cured by it. For sale by all druggists and dealers generally.

THE LAWYER'S SECRET.

It was in a luxuriously furnished room where a soft [illegible] threw a genial light and warmth upon the occupants that Gerald Langton, lawyer and [illegible] sat listening with bated breath and pallid cheeks to a low and tearful voice that told the story of a life.

The speaker, a beautiful woman of about thirty, yet many years younger than Mr. Langton, reclined in a low cushioned chair, her attitude speaking of the ease [illegible], but her face was full of the deepest anguish as her lips recounted the story.

'You love me,' she said gently yet sadly, 'and I love you as I never loved [illegible]. That you know, but did not know my husband's name. By my uncle's last request I dropped it and took his with the property he had left me. Do not look at me tenderly, Gerald: do not shake my voice or my heart, for when you know who I am you will not repeat the offer you made me, and which, heaven is my witness, I tried to divert.'

'Let your conscience be at rest there,' said her listener in a grave yet tender voice. 'You have never given me one hope, Maude. By what instinct I knew that you loved me I can never tell. Something in your eyes—some tone of your voice betrayed you. If, as you say, something in your past life does separate us, you have been no coquette to torment me with false hopes. But, Maude, tell me again, whatever stands between us, you love me!'

'I love you,' she said gravely, 'and it is because I love you that I will not let you link your honorable name with that of the wretch who was my husband. I was very young, not sixteen, when I came to make a visit to some friends living at Grassbank. Uncle Richard has a country seat near the village. I first met Alexander at a picnic, where he was the very life of the party, everybody's cavalier, courteous to all, full of wit and animation and service to all. I believe every girl on the grounds thought he had captivated him, his attentions were so well divided and yet so impressive to each one. He claimed to be no more than a salesman in a large wholesale house with a good salary, but he had the manners of a gentleman of education and the most perfect beauty of face and form that I ever saw in a man. It was not long before it was evident that he wished to win my love, and he had an easy task. Such love as a child of sixteen can give I gave him. He was the impersonation of every hero of poetry and fiction with whom my limited reading had made me familiar. School girl like, I had made an ideal hero, and fitted this my first admirer with all his imaginary perfections.

From the first Uncle Richard disliked him, pronouncing him false and shallow, and assured me that my personal attractions had not won his heart, but the fact of being an heiress to a large property had gained me the protestations in which I so firmly believed.

'It is a painful story to me now, Gerald. Let it suffice that I lived in a world of pleasant dreams while Alexander remained at Grassbank. When he left he carried my promise to be his wife at Christmas.

'I think, if my money had depended on Uncle Richard my marriage might have been prevented by his threatening to disinherit me, but both from my father and mother I had inherited money that made me independent, in a pecuniary sense, of his control or consent.

'Most grudgingly, however, uncle did consent, after searching inquiry about Alexander resulting in no worse report than that his employers thought him fast, idle, and just the man to be a fortune hunter. Even then my dear uncle would have protected my fortune by settling it upon myself, but with the [illegible] generosity of extreme youth I refused to have this done. Never, I was firmly convinced, would my adored Alexander wrong me in any way.

'For a year after the splendid wedding that made me Alexander's wife I was very happy. I was too ignorant of value to understand that we were living far beyond our income—enjoyed to the utmost the luxuries around me—the constant gayety that was in such strong contrast to the school routine from which I had been released.

'Then began a life of neglect, often of quarreling when I objected to my husband's course of conduct—his drinking, his extravagance, his late hours. Still I found my own pleasure in society.

It was four years after our marriage when I was thunderstruck by Alexander asking me to request a loan of money from Uncle Richard, with the information that every penny of my fortune was gone.

'Since then I have known that a large portion of it was lost at the gaming table.

Long before this I had lost all love for husband. Respect had died out when I knew the dissipated life he was leading, and, foolish as I was, I could not continue to love a man whom I despised. I refused the errand and brought down a torrent of abuse that I really expected that Alexander would end by striking me.

Day after day the request was renewed, but I would not yield. Upon my marriage Uncle Richard had sold the town residence and taken up his permanent abode at Grassbank where, knowing my husband to be an unwelcome guest, I never visited him. I wrote occasionally, but the love of years, like that of a father and child, had been so sadly strained by my persistence in marrying Alexander that [illegible] our correspondence was languid and commonplace.

I would not, therefore, write to ask a favor that I knew would not have been necessary without criminal recklessness of expenditure, and each refusal made my husband more furious. Then came an overwhelming blow. Alexander forged a check and drew two thousand pounds of Uncle Richard's money from the bank. I don't think my uncle would have prosecuted him had he guessed who was the forger, but he handed the whole matter over to the law as soon as it was discovered that the check was forged. It was then traced to Alexander and at the same time it was found that he had robbed in the same way his former employers. He had given up all work upon his marriage, but when he found himself without money his knowledge of the business enabled him to forge the name of Derkins & Co. Even if Uncle Richard had spared him for my sake the other forgery would [illegible] years and uncle took me home, full of heavenly pity and forgiveness for the child who had treated him so ungratefully.

'Then your husband is in prison?' said Gerald, in a hard, strained voice.

'No, no, he is dead! He died within the first year. Uncle Richard saw the death in a paper and sent money for the burial. No, I am free, but none the less I am the widow of a convicted felon.'

'But none the less,' quoted Gerald, 'the woman I love and honor above all others, and hope still to make my wife.'

It took, however, more than one interview, full of love's pleading, to win Maude from her resolution. She so honored her lover and was so proud of his good name and the position he had attained by his talent that her sensitive nature shrank from even the shadow of her misery upon his life.

But the victory was won at last and the lawyer walked home one evening full of a proud, glad joy, for Maude had then promised to be his wife.

'If you are willing to take Alexander Hull's widow to be your wife,' she said, 'I will not oppose you any longer, for I certainly love you with all my heart.'

He had no thought but of glad triumph when he turned up the gas in his office. He was in the habit of making a late visit there before going to his bedroom, in case notes or messages were left for him. One lay there on this evening, a shabby looking envelope, but directed in a bold, handsome hand which he recognized at once.

He tore it open. After a few words of introduction, the note ran:

'You did the best you could on my trial, but the facts were too strong for you. I die, as you know, at noon to-morrow. You, as my lawyer, can see me at any time. Will you come as soon as you receive this, and with the gratitude of the man you know as

JAMES FOX.'

'The man I know as James Fox,' muttered the lawyer, 'the smooth, plausible scoundrel who actually made me believe him innocent of the hideous murder for which he was convicted. I can find extenuation for some murders, but this cold blooded assassination of an old man for money only was revolting. How he deceived me, though, for a time, and how he exulted over his success in doing so when he saw facts were too strong. Shall I go to him? I suppose I must. It is still very early.'

It was not yet midnight when Gerald Langton was ushered into the cell of the man who, in a few short hours was to meet the extreme penalty of the law for the worst of all crimes. Yet there was nothing in the appearance of the criminal. His dress was neat, his hair carefully arranged, his mustache faultless, his hands white and refined-looking. He rose from his seat upon the bed as his lawyer entered the cell.

'I knew you would come,' he said courteously, 'though you were offended at my want of frankness. Well, all that is over. You will not refuse the last request of a dying man, Mr. Langton?'

'No, if I can grant it.'

'This,' said the murderer, 'is not my first offense against the law. Some years ago I was sentenced to a term of years for forgery. By a strange accident I escaped the penalty. On the same day James Fox was sentenced to two years for petty larceny, and we were sent together to prison. James Fox—my companion—was deranged, but his lawyers had not been able to save him, as his aberation was not always apparent. When we were entered upon the books of the prison, imagine my amazement when my fellow-prisoner gave my name as his own. Like a flash I saw the advantage to be gained by the deception, and allowed the error to pass. My companion committed suicide, and I escaped with two years' imprisonment instead of seven. But I feared recognition and went to Canada. There I lived by my wits until a year ago, when I returned to try and raise money from my wife, and thought I saw an easier plan by committing the crime for which I die to-morrow. But I want to see my wife. I wronged her—I robbed her—but heaven knows I love her. When I was in prison she dropped my name and took her own again. So it is not for Mrs. Alexander Hull you must ask for, but for Mrs. Maude Temple.'

Was the room reeling—the ceiling falling—the walls closing in around him? Gerald Langton felt that they were as the name fell upon his ears. Maude—his Maude—the wife of this cool villain, who talked of his hideous crimes as if they were ordinary events? Well he knew that to carry this man's message was to separate himself and Maude forever. Never would she let him marry the wife of a murderer! Very rapidly all of the terrible facts passed one after the other, and he said: 'If you love her, why add a misery to her life? She may have lived down the old pain you caused her; why, for a selfish gratification, will you make her whole life a misery?'

'She is my wife.' 'I would bid her farewell.'

'She is not your wife. Your own crimes have released her from any allegiance to you.'

'You know her?'

'Yes. I know that she has suffered and beg of you to let her still believe you died years ago.'

'Is she happy?'

'Scarcely that. Such wounds as hers never heal entirely, but it is cruelty to tear them open when they are quiet.'

'Has she married?'

'No.' 'She is still your widow.'

'It is hard to deny myself one more sight of her face, and the hope I had that she would say she forgave me.'

'Think of her, not of yourself.'

There was a long silence in that dingy cell.

Every throb of Gerald Langton's heart was a severe pain to him, but Alexander Hull sat in a [illegible] his wish.

At last he spoke.

'You have been good to me. Tell me now, if you have any personal reason for your request. Perhaps you love her?'

'I do,' was the reply. 'She has promised to be my wife.'

'Then it will be James Fox who will be hanged to-morrow. I meant to give my real name, but I will carry my secret to the grave. It may be in another world that this little self-denial will be a plea for me. Go now. You may trust me.'

He kept his word, and Gerald Langton his secret.

When Maude a few weeks later became his wife she little guessed the terrible ordeal which he had spared her or the added disgrace that belonged to the name she had given up.

The New Order

'Have you heard of the new order?'

'What new order?' eagerly asked the reporter, making a move for his pencil.

'Why, that the government is not going to issue the postal cards any longer.'

'Is that so?' said the reporter, much interested, and this time pulling out a great dab of soft paper and a stubby pencil.

'It's a fact. They will not be made any longer.'

With a vision of of a scoop on all the English, Bohemian and Scandinavian papers floating before him, the reporter asked in a whisper, 'Where did you get your information?'

'Well, we haven't any official information.'

'That certainly will be a great hardship to the poor people,' ventured the reporter.

'I don't see how it will,' replied the official.

'I suppose that it was done on account of the reduction on letters to two cents.'

'Can't say.'

'No, that is not the reason they decided not to make them any longer,' spoke up another official, who was writing.

'Well, what is the reason then?' asked the now desperate reporter, in a low voice.

'Why, simply because they are long enough now. The government and the people are very well satisfied with the present length.'

The door closed with a bang as the reporter slid out.

A couple of pickpockets followed a gentleman for some blocks with a view of availing themselves of the first opportunity to relieve him of his purse. He suddenly turned into a lawyer's office. "What shall we do now?" asked one. "Why, you cussed fool, we'll wait for the lawyer, of course," replied the other.

I would recommend Ely's Cream Balm to any one having catarrh or catarrhal asthma. I have suffered for five years so I could not lie down for weeks at a time. Since I have been using the balm I can lie down and rest. I thank God that you ever invented such a medicine. FRANK P. BURLEIGH, Farmington, N. H.

My son, aged nine years, was afflicted with catarrh; the use of Ely's Cream Balm effected a complete cure.—W. E. HAMMAN, Druggist, Easton, Pa. (50 cts. a package. See adv.)

A LADY-LIKE COW.

Arkansaw Traveller.

Nothing more than a good, kind-hearted and gentle milch cow rounds off and tempers down the many difficulties standing in the way of family contentment. When Parson Jilminson moved to our neighborhood, his first question was, "Who's got a gentle cow for sale?" Old Nick Parish, one of the best known and most upright man in the community, had a gentle cow. If a man wanted a firey unsubdued horse, Nick had him, and if he wanted a horse so quiet in demeanor that he refrained from lashing the flies, Nick had him. In fact, Nick had anything that anybody wanted to buy, and the one thing peculiar about his ability to furnish the great market of wants was that every animal he sold was exactly what he represented it to be.

"Is she a good milker?" asked Parson Jilminson when he had gone to Nick's lot and begun an inspection of the cow.

'Best in the land, and the one fine pint about her is that she'll give milk enough for any family. Whenever she changes hands she sizes up the new family and if she ain't broad enough to accommodate all concerned, why, she changes her gauge. But she is not prodigal. I bought her from a hotel man. She has been giving enough milk for all the guests, but when she saw that I only had a small family she changed her meter and came down to our measure.'

"I never before heard of such a cow," said the parson.

'Nobody else, and if my wife didn't try to impose on her I wouldn't sell her for anything. You see my wife is a very ambitious woman, and wants this one cow to furnish enough milk for the operation of an entire dairy farm. I will not allow even my wife to monkey with the affections of this animal. Just look at her. Did you ever see anything more lady like? There she stands, the very picture of courtesy, willing to inundate the entire community in milk.'

'What is the least you'll take for her?' the parson asked.

'Well, I'll tell you. If it wan't for the pints I've presented, I wouldn't sell her for no price, but as it is, you may have her for $100.'

The money was paid without hesitation, and in triumph the parson drove the cow home.

"Greatest cow in the world," he said to his wife as he turned the animal into the back yard. "The man had sentimental reasons for selling her or we never would have been her fortunate possessors."

The next day was Sunday. The parson had an appointment to preach at [illegible] was seen crossing the common, carrying an army gun. As he approached Parish's house Parish was seen to leap the fence and start off in a practical and commercial-like manner toward the woods. The parson discovered him, threw up his gun and fired, and so much powder had his indignation demanded in the execution of his sanguinary design that the bullet, long after the excitement had subsided, was heard whizzing around the neighborhood.

'What on earth is the matter, parson?' asked a dozen voices as the minister approached the church and proceeded to load his gun.

'Bought a cow from that scoundrel. Told me she was gentle. Wife got up this morning to milk her. Shortly after she went out I thought I heard mutters and other sounds expressive of dissatisfaction, and stepping to the door I saw my wife going over the ash hopper. My wife is a woman of unusual agility, yet I saw no reason why she should sail through the air on a Sunday morning, so I stepped out and told her to hold up, when I saw my lady like cow raking up ridges and looking as though she were displeased. I spoke to her and she darted at me. I tried to avoid her, but failed. I went over the ash hopper pretty much as my wife had done. This was not the end of the performance. The cow could not get behind the ash hopper, but she made it sensational for us by reminders that she was still in circulation. The dog came over and fell among us. Then a washtub, a brass kettle, the cat, and the hired boy came over. I never saw anything like it. Every time I looked up something would strike me. After awhile she began to throw dirt and chips over, until I thought we would all be buried. I yelled for help, and old Mrs. Pigglesworth, kind old soul, who lives near, came to see what was the matter, good hearted old creature. The heathen that sold me the cow said that she would size us all up with an idea to furnish the requisite amount of milk, and probably that's what she was doing, but I am not used to such estimates being made on my family. Finally she, the courteous animal, jumped over the fence and left and I am out on an important errand. No, I can't preach for you to-day," putting a cap on the gun, as he caught sight of Parish peeping from behind a distant tree. "I wish you all well, and hope the Lord will take care of you, but at present I am compelled to discharge a duty which I owe to my wife, myself, my neighbors, and society," and cocking the army gun, slipped out in the direction of Parish's hiding place like an antelope hunter.

THE secret of the universal success of Brown's Iron Bitters is owing to the fact that it is the very best iron preparation made. By a thorough and rapid assimilation with the blood it reaches every part of the body, giving health, strength and endurance to every portion. Thus beginning at the foundation it builds up and restores lost health. It does not contain whisky or alcohol. It will not blacken the teeth. It does not constipate or cause headache. It will cure dyspepsia, indigestion, heartburn, sleeplessness, dizziness, nervous debility, weakness, etc.

WENDELL PHILLIPS.

Recollections of the Dead Genius Recalled by Mrs. Mary A. Livermore.

"No shillyshallying to-day, Wendell, in the face of that mob!" These unflinching words were written upon a scrap of paper and scanned by Wendell Phillips as he faced a terrible hostile and turbulent throng gathered in one of Boston's great halls, on a certain day in the portentous winter or spring of 1861. Did Wendell Phillips need inspiration, or strong words, or a more powerful incentive to glorious achievements than slavery itself? Perhaps not—yet, who can say? But there was a voice potent and inspiring as archangel's trumpet, an influence to sway and direct the giant Wendell Phillips was—that voice was the voice of the loyal wife at home, a woman for a quarter of a century, and still, alas! an unhappy invalid, racked by tortures of body, but ever clear, true, competent, and energetic in her powers of mind. And this brave heart it was that day who sent the little note to liberty's champion, braving the tumult and anger of a mighty mob in that Boston hall. Did he quail at their crowings and hootings and shoutings and insults? Never a whit. In that audience was Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, and it was she, for forty years a friend of Wendell Phillips, for fifteen years closely identified with him, that told the incident to the Inter-Ocean representative as the two sat in a parlor at the Sherman yesterday. For years she labored with the great agitator and knew the man through and through. So when she told this story and spoke at no small length of the noble dead, she spoke of the things whereof she knew.

And Wendell Phillips performed his task that day with the magnificent courage that goes with conviction. Young men armed to the teeth escorted him home from that demonstration of well-dressed citizens—merchants dismissed their employees to attend such in those days. An abolitionist might win martyrdom then without half trying. But the orator reached his home safely. From the steps of his house what did the indomitable Phillips say to the hostile throng in the street? This: "Gentlemen of the mob of Boston, I bid you good night. You have annoyed me very much to-night with your mobocratic manifestations, but I warn you the time will come when you will annoy me more by your ovations." "And the time did come," added Mrs. Livermore, "in less than six weeks."

Wendell Phillips cared nought for, nor succumbed to the circumstances of popular disapproval. Some years after he was addressing a great audience in Philadelphia, and General Grant was his theme. [illegible] succeeded each other in waves, now from this and now from that part of the house. He concluded and started to leave the stage. He was arrested or recalled. He advanced and sent this shaft quivering into the midst of the Philadelphians: "I am glad to see that in this stagnant old city you have got the life even to hiss."

Here is another instance showing the magnanimity, breath, and Christian spirit and understanding of the man. It was at a labor-reform meeting in Boston fourteen or fifteen years ago. The workingmen were not over and above clean, the odor was almost intolerable. Said Mrs. Livermore, occupying a seat on the platform near Wendell Phillips: "The odor of this room is unbearable—do you enjoy it?" Wendell Phillips thus nobly replied:

"Do you suppose Jesus Christ enjoyed association with those twelve ignorant, unlettered fishermen who never understood him, to whom he always gave himself out, but from whom he never received anything, who undoubtedly smelt fishy and talked fishy, but with whom he cast his lot, upheaving them with the force of his own divine mightiness."

'And what could you say in reply, Mrs. Livermore?'

"What was there to say, so gently and beautifully reproached!"

Wendell Phillips nursed his beloved wife with sweet, untiring devotion, believing none could minister to her wants as could he. Once Mrs. Livermore, returning from California, assured him how important would be a visit of his to that state, where the new generation would hold it the event of their lives to have heard him. "When I told him," said Mrs. Livermore, "that Mrs. Phillips could spare him, this was the beautiful tribute of the man who, his friends sometimes thought should from the very calls upon his greatness more frequently leave her side.

"'Yes, she says so, but I know she is not as well when I am away, that nobody can lift her or move her as well as I, or make her as comfortable. Do you know, if I have done anything for the cause of reform or have helped the country to a nobler interpretation of liberty, I owe it to the fact that my wife has seen more clearly than I have and all that I have done has been to follow her humbly, holding to the hem of her garments. May God forget me in my direst hour of need if I fail to render her every source in my power in her time of suffering.'"

Wendell Phillips' last public oration was delivered Dec. 26, in Old South Church, on the occasion of the unveiling of the statue of Harriet Martineau. It was not certain that he would appear, and the hearts of the speakers were ill at ease. At the hour the form of Wendell Phillips was seen entering the door. Then those conducting the exercises knew that all would be well. Mrs. Livermore and William Lloyd Garrison, Jr., curtailed their speeches to give more time to him of the silver tongue. He spoke as he never spoke before. When the statue was unveiled he pronounced it a grand thing, and when going out he remarked to Mrs. Livermore that that was probably the last speech he should ever make. But he wanted very much to outlive his wife, that his care of her might never know surcease. She knew his malady. The other day Boston and the world knew that it had conquered, and the heart of him that loved liberty forever was still.

Enumerating his remarkable and noble gifts as an orator and man, Mrs. Livermore alluded to what seemed his gift of prophecy.

The second day after Sumter was fired upon Mrs. Livermore visited William Lloyd Garrison at the office of the Liberator, and asked him what he thought would be the outcome of the demonstrations. He told her the south intended war, and was prepared for it.

Wendell Phillips came in and said: "There will be no slavery in this land in ten years. No, I don't believe that; there won't be any in five years." And in five years there was none.

Wendell Phillips was a wealthy man. His widow, also, is a lady of means. The philanthropist gave thousands yearly, but to publish his donations was to stop the generous flow. How the deceased's property will be distributed Mrs. Livermore is quite unable to say. There are relatives to be remembered. Certain movements, Mrs. Livermore thinks, will receive aid from the friend of man who held, Matthew Arnold and the "remnant" to the contrary notwithstanding, that "everybody is wiser than somebody."

AT DUSK IN PIKE COUNTY.

A New York Man's Sleigh-Ride Enlivened by a Hungry Catamount.

Correspondence N. Y. Sun.

A man driving a horse covered with foam from head to foot drove into the village of Milford, Pa., just after dark a few nights since. He was suffering from nervous shock. His buffalo robe was badly torn, his whip broken, and the back part of his sleigh splintered and covered with scratches and deep indentations. The man gave his name as C. D. Keeney, of New York. He was a traveling sewing-machine agent. He had been attacked by a catamount four miles from Milford, and had only escaped from it after a desperate contest. He told this story:

He was on his way to Milford, over one of the lonely, narrow, and crooked back roads of Dingman township, bordered by deep woods. It was nearly dark, and just as he was rounding one of the short turns in the road his horse, which is somewhat spirited, suddenly shied, and then gave a jump forward, and started on a furious run. At the same time the animal sprang from the side of the road. It had evidently leaped for the horse, but the quick movement of the latter defeated its purpose, and it alighted with its fore feet on the buffalo robe that lay across Keeney's lap. The animal glared savagely at Keeney, as it clung to the robe with its claws, and uttered fierce growls. Keeney had [illegible], but fortunately his whip was heavily loaded at the butt.

Clinging to the reins with his left hand, he drew the whip from the socket and dealt the catamount a blow with it on the head which caused it to loosen its hold on the robe and drop into the snow. It instantly renewed the attack with increased fury, and sprang upon the back of the sleigh. Although the horse was running madly away along the narrow and crooked road, throwing the sleigh from side to side and threatening it constantly with destruction against some rock or stump. Keeney was obliged to drop the reins and leave the result to chance for the catamount was fighting desperately and furiously to gain a foothold in the sleigh and close with its occupant.

Keeney says he knew that in case the sleigh collided with any heavy obstacle he would be no match for the catamount fighting on the slippery snow, even if he were thrown out and unharmed, and so he strained every nerve to conquer it while he was still at an advantage in the sleigh. Once he thought it was all up with him, for as the sleigh was carried abruptly around a turn one runner struck a stone, and the sleigh tipped over and ran for several yards on the other runner. Keeney mechanically threw the weight of his body against the upper side, while still raining blows on the catamount, and forced the runner back on the track.

A few more blows after that and Keeney was rejoiced to see the tenacious brute first loosen one claw, hang for an instant with the other while it tried to seize the back of the back of the sleigh with its teeth, and then fall with a loud yell into the snow and lie there motionless.

Keeney dropped back in his seat too weak to make any endeavor to regain control of his horse, which was still rushing wildly along the uncertain road, now made more uncertain by the gathering darkness. After running for three miles the horse was compelled to come to a stop from exhaustion. Keeney had recovered sufficiently to drive in the rest of the way.

Three catamounts have been killed recently near the scene of Keeney's adventure. These animals are considered dangerous antagonists when wounded or cornered, but it is only when they are rendered desperate by hunger that they venture to attack a man.

THE "BLOODY SHIRT."

[illegible] the republicans of the entire country have desired to see the words "bloody shirt" eliminated from the vocabulary of party politics. From year to year they have [illegible] the current of events in those southern states where there is a large proportion of republican voters [illegible] that there would at least be some degree of fairness [illegible] of peaceable, law-abiding citizens when [illegible] the republican ticket [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] Danville, Virginia [illegible] Mississippi [illegible]

[illegible]

We give our democratic friends due notice that the "bloody shirt" will continue to wave just as long as such barbarisms as these are practiced on American soil. This business will go farther towards making the north solid for the next republican candidate for president than any other one cause, despite the [illegible] of the [illegible] press as to southern outrages.

If the Democrats don't find some way to dissipate that treasury surplus, it will not be for lack of ingenuity. The construction provides the pensioning of [illegible] of the Confederacy, but with Hewitt as decoy duck they hope to ring in large numbers of them by his bill to pension all the soldiers and their sisters and their cousins and their aunts who served two months in the Mexican war.

SEND your best and most representative men as delegates to the county convention. Let there be an unmistakable expression of the voice of the people.

THE Philadelphia Press states that Senator Emery, J. W. Cochran, ex-Judge [illegible] C. A. Hill, D. W. C. [illegible] and H. C. McCormick are thus far mentioned as candidates for national delegates from this congressional district.

CONGRESSMAN BROWN did himself and his constituents great credit in a recent speech in the house of representatives protesting against the revival of the doctrine of "states rights" which has been, or should have been, effectually exploded by the logic of war and events. It was a manly and patriotic protest and won much praise from his colleagues.

THE 27th congressional district composed of the counties of Erie, Warren and Venango have adopted a very simple plan for the selection of delegates to the national convention. At a meeting of representatives from the three counties held at Corry on the [illegible] of February it was agreed that the [illegible] who should be selected to represent the three counties in the state convention should meet in their places the Saturday before the convention and agree upon the delegates to represent that district in the national convention. We can see no [illegible] in this arrangement as the [illegible] will undoubtedly represent [illegible] of the people of the district.

THE idea advocated by the republican congressional campaign committee of soliciting voluntary contributions [illegible] campaign fund [illegible] It takes a heap of money to pay the [illegible] expenses [illegible] contributions of those interested in the success of the party. It would seem that those most directly and personally interested [illegible] anything, that they are as certain to be turned out into the cold, cold world in case the blight of a democratic administration falls upon the country as the sun is to rise. [illegible]

COLONEL QUAY'S VIEWS.

There has been so much said about the views of M. S. Quay that the following reliable statement addressed to the Philadelphia Press from him will perhaps be interesting to any [illegible] himself is the best authority as to his own views. It will be seen that they accord with those of the best element of the party, and that he is not [illegible] as is [illegible] charged by some eternal political croakers. He writes:

EDITOR OF THE PRESS: Yesterday's Press copies from the New York Sun a Harrisburg despatch purporting to give my relations to the republican organization of Pennsylvania. It is not necessary to say to you that it is false in its statements of facts and in inferences. My relations with the gentleman named are of a friendly character and I am aware of no conspiracy for the defeat of any of them.

The newspapers of the state having recently made very free with my name and movements it may not be improper to say that while I do not hesitate as a private citizen to exercise my right of judgment and express my opinions upon political questions before the public, I am not engaged in any movement for the benefit of any presidential candidate, nor would I sympathize with any such movement. I believe that the present in Pennsylvania is an hour of trial. It seems to be the duty of the republicans of the state, discarding personal preferences, to send a delegation to Chicago who after looking over the entire field in the light of the situation as it exists on the 3d of June will aid in the selection of a candidate for the presidency solely for the best interest of the commonwealth, the party and the country. Thus only can Pennsylvania impress herself upon the convention and upon the administration of her choice.

I have not said to any one, the newspaper reports to the contrary notwithstanding, that I was in favor of the nomination of Arthur, though my personal preference is for him; nor that the Pennsylvania delegation would vote for him, nor that Logan would be a second choice, nor have I had any intimation that Senator Cameron desired to interfere in any way in the canvass. M. S. QUAY.

Philadelphia, Feb. 27.

THE BARBARISM OF DEMOCRACY.

When Senator Sherman first introduced his resolution, asking for an investigation into the election outrages in Virginia and Mississippi, it was received with a [illegible] of strong dissent. There was an evident reluctance among a large number of republicans to any movement which looked like bringing the sectional issue into the canvass of this year. More important questions, it was believed, demanded consideration, and any action was deprecated which would turn attention away from these. This was the state of the public mind when the investigation began and the democrats were credited with unusual discretion for refusing to enter upon a partisan debate. To-day an entire change is noted, and where there was listlessness and [illegible] formerly there is now keen attention and watchful interest.

The democrats [illegible] cast a solid vote against the passage of the Sherman resolution, and well they might, for nothing in all the history of the democracy illustrates more strikingly its essential barbarism than the facts developed by these investigations. The Danville riot is revolting enough, but it lacks many of the cold blooded features of the Copiah murder. The telegraph has already spread over the country the testimony of the witnesses given before the committee now sitting in New Orleans. The fact is proved and not denied even by the witnesses called by the democrats themselves that the only crime of the man Matthews consisted in his desire to [illegible] the right to vote [illegible]

SEVERAL of the newspapers of the state have kindly mentioned the name of Thos. V. Cooper of this journal as suitable for presentation as the republican candidate for congressman at large. He is not a candidate for that position and has no desire for it. He is a candidate for return to the state senate, a place which suits him very well.—Del. Co. American.

THE newspaper enterprise which gathers up figures indicating the presidential choice of the people who happen to be interviewed is interesting and attended by curious results sometimes, but it is valueless as a forecast of the probable action of the convention.

Prayer Without Faith.

In a recent speech in Philadelphia Mr Randall said: "For nineteen or twenty years I have been in congress hoping, praying and wishing that I might see there a democratic president." The trouble with this hoping and praying and wishing of Mr Randall is that no faith went with these exercises. He has been like the old lady who once exclaimed: "I prayed to have the hill opposite my house set back a good bit. But it was not set back—and I knew it wouldn't be."—Pittsburg Gazette.

MATTHEW S. QUAY has bought a house in Beaver from Marshal Rutan and intends to remove there to live.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

[illegible], Pa., has been made a presidential office and the salary of the postmaster fixed at $1,000.

SIXTY FOUR counties in Texas did not vote at the last presidential election. Many of them have since been organized and will be heard from this year.

MRS. GENERAL GARFIELD has written a letter to Mr Horr of Michigan thanking him for his speech in opposition to the Fitz John Porter bill.—Hartford Times.

A GOOD many Indiana democrats are again alleging that Stephen Dorsey bought them in 1880 at $2 a head. Even the devastating work of the great flood does not prevent these enterprising patriots from assuring the country that they are again in the market.

THE Mississippi legislature has been polled and found to stand thirty eight for Tilden and thirty five for all other presidential candidates. The Vicksburg Herald thinks that the expression of a preference of thirty eight democrats for a feeble old paralytic like Samuel J. Tilden for the presidency is thoroughly in accord with some other idiotic acts of the members.

THE president has sent the following nominations to the senate: John K. Valentine to be United States attorney for the eastern district of Pennsylvania; James N. Kerns to be United States marshall for the eastern district of Pennsylvania; John M. Vanderslice of Pennsylvania to be pension agent at Philadelphia; William M. Bunn of Pennsylvania to be governor of Idaho territory.

THE Virginia democrats threw out the vote of [illegible] precinct on a mere formality and thus defeated the election of [illegible], readjuster, to the legislature. A special election was held Tuesday last and the Richmond Whig says that [illegible] received every vote polled there, even the democrats voting solidly for him. This is a little incident, but it is very suggestive [illegible] the bounds of Virginia.

THERE is a lively fight in progress in the Dauphin district for delegate to the democratic convention at Chicago. J. Blake Walters and J. H. Irwin are the principal contestants. The former is known as the friend of Wallace and the latter is [illegible] with the state administration. Walters is not an enthusiastic admirer of the governor and is not afraid to express his opinion in plain Anglo-Saxon.

AT THE joint meeting of the Virginia republican and readjuster state central committees in Richmond Saturday the utmost harmony is said to have prevailed. Mr J. H. [illegible], a republican, was the only member of either organization absent. A call was issued for a joint state convention to meet in Richmond April 23d to appoint delegates to Chicago and nominate presidential electors. All voters opposed to Bourbonism and in favor of protection, education and free suffrage are invited to participate in the primaries.

THE supporters of other presidential candidates are seemingly anxious to have it appear that Senator Edmunds would not accept the nomination of the Chicago convention and frequent statements are made to that effect. On the contrary the Boston Journal has this information from its Washington correspondent: One of the nearest friends of Mr Edmunds has acknowledged that Mr Edmunds would accept the nomination if it should come to him with a good degree of unanimity—a fact which has hardly [illegible]

H. C. McCORMICK, Esq., has consented to be a candidate for delegate to the Chicago national convention from this congressional district. It will be remembered that after much persuasion he consented to be a candidate for congress two years ago, but after a long contest the nomination was given to W. W. Brown, the present incumbent. He possesses all the elements to make an excellent delegate and will no doubt enter the field with a strong following. It is scarcely necessary to add that he is solid for Blaine.—Williamsport Bulletin.

THE [illegible] that the bill which has passed the house for the restoration of Fitz John Porter to the army is so worded as to probably require the payment to him of salary during all the time since his dishonorable dismissal in 1862 is made in good time. The bill has not yet passed the senate, and it is not likely that that body, even if willing to restore him, will consent to his receiving arrears of salary amounting to well toward $100,000. The house clearly did not understand the meaning of the bill, though we should be surprised to learn that the man who drew it did not. It was probably put in its present shape with intent to deceive.—Buffalo Express.

Inspiring Incidents in Congress.

No sooner has the Hewitt-Belmont affair in the house been dropped than Messrs. Vest and Butler begin to revile each other in the senate. If it were not for these personal encounters congress would be as dull as business is.—Detroit Journal.

The Same Thing Under a New Name.

Free trade has a new name. It is used by newspapers that don't care to admit that they are free trade organs in the usual terms, so they advocate a reduction of duties in the direction of "unfettered commerce."—Phila. North American.

Give Him Credit for His Patriotism.

It is apparent that somebody has been misrepresenting Colonel Quay's views on Pennsylvania politics. Perhaps it was Mr Conkling's Posson Snyder—who knows? At all events let us not forget, fellow republicans, that Colonel Quay's heart beats warmly for his native state.—Phila. Press.

One Manly Editor at Least.

The Meridian (Miss.) Mercury having declared in favor of lynch law for the negro, the Memphis (Tenn.) Avalanche says that he is as grievous a mistake as the ancient idea that slavery was a divine institution. It adds that the savage bigotry witnessed in Copiah and Yazoo is not endorsed by the southern people at large.—Pottsville Journal.

Victory at Elmira.

The municipal election in Elmira last Tuesday resulted in the election of Dr Henry Flood, republican, for mayor by a majority of 832 over Reers, democrat, the largest majority ever given a mayor in that city. The republicans elected five out of seven councilmen, and six out of seven supervisors. The democrats only elected one city official, a justice of the peace, whose majority was between twenty and thirty. The vote polled was a large one, great interest being taken in the result. Rev. Thos. K. Beecher received 56 votes for mayor. The republicans are jubilant over the victory. Elmira usually gave a democratic majority of from four to six hundred, which makes the result all the more encouraging to the republicans.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Judge Williams held court in Potter county this week.

The Keating township [illegible] their [illegible] on Monday.

Candidates for county offices are rather shy about making themselves known.

Turn off all your gas when you leave your house or office. You can never tell what is going to happen.

The sheriff contributes three or four advertising communications of a lengthy character this issue.

Deputy Sheriff Wheatley brought over three prisoners from Bradford on Wednesday. They were a hard lot.

Smethport has an increased banking place [illegible] the town is surely well provided for in that respect.

The announcement of the appointment of the business [illegible] of the county [illegible] will be published next week.

Hale [illegible] the Bradford tailor, will be in this borough in about a couple of weeks prepared to take the measure of his customers for spring suits.

It is now [illegible] to apply for licenses in this borough [illegible] withholding the publication of the names of signers of petitions.

The reading of the Folio Gazette and kindred publications is [illegible] in print this week in the Della Clough case.

The residence of Mr. Clark White in Norwich township was burned [illegible] day evening. We understand that the fire was occasioned by a defective chimney.

Our readers will please [illegible] the Smethport gas company with [illegible] this issue. It takes gas to [illegible] and coal, and we must have heat if we don't have gas.

After a brief vacation during which time the sheriff kindly took charge of the business, [illegible] Webb has re-opened his carpet store in Bradford, with [illegible]

A man by the name of McGrannis was hanged in Philadelphia the other day for killing his mother-in-law. The law seems to be enforced with great severity in the Quaker City.

The first annual dance of the [illegible] church club was not a financial success. The members were three. One [illegible] out and the other two and [illegible] had to foot the bills [illegible]

Through a misunderstanding we were made to say last week that the price of admission at the opera house this and tomorrow evenings would be [illegible] charges are 25 [illegible]

The Republican says that Mr. J. A. [illegible] has signified his purpose to appropriate the sum named in [illegible] will $5,000 for the purpose of erecting a soldiers' monument in [illegible] cemetery.

An old wagon or a new one can be made to last much longer if it is kept well painted. Mr. Wesner has first class painters in his employ at his wagon shop and will be pleased to give your old wagon a fresh coat or to sell you a new one. Give him a trial order.

At William Mastiss' wagon shop you can get good, serviceable and well made lumber wagons at prices as reasonable as from any other manufacturer. Patronize home industry and home mechanics and get an article that you know to be what it is recommended.

With the addition of Bro. Wright the editorial corps of the Democrat its ability will doubtless be formidable, two of them having grown gray in the service. But we will try to hold them back and keep them from doing any serious damage in the community.

Public curiosity as to the authorship of [illegible] has greatly subsided and now the question agitating the public mind is who wrote that editorial in the Era Tuesday morning entitled "Blowing our own horn." It was a masterpiece of egotism and its author should not remain in obscurity.

We are assured by a prominent legal gentleman of Bradford that a law firm of that city earned $3000 from clients who were applicants for license at the recent term of court. That is a pretty high figure—probably too high but there is no doubt that the obtaining of licenses is the most profitable branch of the business of some of our attorneys.

Mr. Rogers, the proprietor of the Miner, is detained by the care of his mining interests in the mountains of Colorado. From a lengthy article in the Leadville Democrat of a few days since we gather that the prospects of the [illegible] Consolidated Company's mines with which Mr. Rogers is connected are growing every day more flattering.

A movement is inaugurated by many leading lawyers in the state in favor of the judges of the supreme court of the state wearing robes of office while on the bench. Why not extend the rule to county judges and associates too? Yes, and have every lawyer attend court followed by a half starved clerk carrying his papers in a green bag. It would all be delightfully English.

J. H. Johnston, the gun man or better known as owner and proprietor of the Great Western gun works, Pittsburg, Pa., will mail free a large illustrated catalogue of rifles, shotguns, revolvers, etc. [illegible] He will send you a gun by express, [illegible] can examine it at express office and if not satisfactory return at his cost. This is certainly a very fair proposition, and is a guarantee of honest dealing.

The Owego Blade says: "It is now probable that all towns of 2,000 inhabitants and over will enjoy the convenience of letter carriers. The house committee on postoffices have agreed to report such a bill, as also one for the issue of a special 10 cent stamp which when attached to a letter will secure its immediate delivery by any carrier from 7 p. m. to 12 midnight."

Lecture by Senator Emery

Hon. L. Emery Jr., will [illegible] a very [illegible] lecture at the Opera House for the benefit of McKean Post 347, G. A. R., the proceeds to go towards carpeting and furnishing their Post room. As soon as the date is fixed the public will be notified.

Donation.

There will be a donation at the dining hall of the [illegible] house, Thursday, Mar 13 in the afternoon and evening, for the benefit of Rev. F. H. Gates. A cordial invitation is extended to everybody, and a good time is anticipated. Entrance to the hall through Haskell & Burdick's office.

A Sad Accident.

Charles McCord of Colesville while engaged skidding logs at Wright's mill, on Monday met with a sudden and terrible death. The logs which were piled upon the skidway gave way and rolled down upon him killing him instantly. He had been twice married and leaves a wife and little boy.

Illustrated Sermon.

Through an unexpected delay in transportation the paintings did not arrive in time for the service at the M. E. church last Sunday evening as announced last week, but the paintings are now here, and the first of the series, "The Wise and Foolish," will be delivered at 7 o'clock next Sunday evening. All invited.

A Narrow Escape.

Miss Lois Bush, daughter of Andrew Bush, of Keating township, undertook to cross the McKean & Buffalo railroad track ahead of an approaching train on Wednesday and met with a narrow escape from death. She was struck by the engine and thrown about ten feet, suffering severe bruises, but it is believed not otherwise seriously injured.

A Prolonged Investigation.

The preliminary investigation of the charge of criminal malpractice against Dr. [illegible] and Mrs. Bailey resulting in the death of Miss Della Clough, at Bradford is being held before Justice Ward and it is believed will be concluded to-day. The evidence already presented makes it very clear that a wrong has been done by someone, but it is not very conclusive as to the guilt of the parties charged with the crime.

Here's a Fake Warning

Here is a brand new trick just blossomed out: The beauty of the trick is its simplicity and the reader will do well to [illegible] it. A fellow [illegible] into a drug store or grocery and asks for a cake of soap and tenders a $10 bill in payment. The clerk returns a $5 bill and $4.90 cents in change. Then he notes that you already had ten cents in change which you put with the $4.90 asking the clerk at the same time to give you a $5 bill for the change. After getting the bill pull out the first $5 and say to the clerk, "Here is $10—just give me back the $10." Simple as this plan is it frequently fools the confused clerk and leaves the customer $5 ahead and the cake of soap ahead.

The Grand Jury on the Poor House

At the last regular term of court the grand jury in their presentment to court expressed themselves upon the subject of the county poor house. They urge upon the county commissioners at once as is their duty to take the steps necessary to carry out the wishes of the people and express the opinion that the farm should be purchased, buildings erected and everything in preparation for adopting the new system during the present year. One reason given why this should be done is that thus the poor house question [illegible] made to enter as a factor or an issue in the election next fall and a very good reason it is. We understand that it is the intention of the commissioners to take prompt action in the matter just as soon as the season will permit.

PERSONAL MENTION.

N. A. Fish has joined the ranks of inventors.

Hon. L. Hamlin and party are expected home to-day.

We have not yet had an opportunity to send that receipt to our friend, the insurance agent.

A. B. Bowler, one of the leading merchants of [illegible] took dinner at the Grand Central on Thursday.

Peter Lindsay, Esq., visited the county seat on Thursday. Peter was expected during the license court but was principally conspicuous by his absence.

R. R. Andrews, formerly superintendent of the Smethport Furnace Works, now living near Tionesta, has been calling on old friends in our borough.

J. J. Newman of Buffalo has been in town most of the week and on Thursday visited Bradford in company with D. C. Young, to look after their oil interests.

Congressman Brown says he is accused of being too intimate with Senator Mitchell. It is to be hoped that he will be able to clear himself of so serious a charge.

W. K. Morse of Ceres is disposing of his property in this county with the purpose of seeking a warmer climate. The winters of McKean are too severe for his health.

We understand that C. C. Wright Esq. of Port Allegany intends to move his family to this borough and will accept a position on the editorial staff of the McKean Democrat.

Dick Abbot got his license. His little rolling chair and crippled condition did the business and P. T. Kennedy assured the court that he would see to it that [illegible] complied with the law.

Capt. Hayden Cowles of the regular army, son of Hon. Warren Cowles, some years ago a resident of this borough and state senator from this district, is visiting friends in the borough.

James Bresler the mayor of Bradford city has been an interested attendant at the license court, probably to see that none but the most moral of his constituents are licensed to sell whisky.

It is said that ex-sheriff R. Sartwell will be strongly urged as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for sheriff this fall. He got there very easily six years ago and is believed by his friends to be the strongest candidate his party can name.

A. L. Hummel, one of the employees of the Miner, came to the office this morning with a firm, stalwart, get-out-of-the-way tread and the halo of a glad light illuminating his countenance. He is the father of a new born girl—a future candidate for ice cream and seal skin sacques.

P. T. Kennedy was about the only stumbling block in the way of applicants for license at this term of court. Peter doesn't trade on sentiment alone, when he objects to a man in Bradford receiving a license it may be safely assumed that there are good legal and moral grounds for refusing it.

License Court.

The regular term of court of last week was adjourned until Monday of this week for the hearing of license applications. It was expected that a vigorous and determined effort would be made by the Gentlemen's Temperance Union of Bradford to diminish the number of licenses granted, and that none but those who could show a clean record as to character and the violation of the liquor laws could possibly get a license. The subject had been under agitation for several weeks, and the anxious seekers for legal authority to dispense intoxicating drinks came before the court with troubled hearts and pallid brows. But their fears were groundless. The temperance people failed to come to the front. Comparatively few applications met with any remonstrance or serious objections. Such that did were refused. In other cases the court based its decision upon the law as it stands. We observe that the Era, with the zeal of a new born convert to morality and reform, expresses certain criticisms upon the action of the court. If any criticism is needed, it is in the direction of those zealous persons who let their zeal flag and ooze out when the time came to make the struggle. The applicants were on hand with the numerously signed petitions, their friends and well paid attorneys. There was no concerted and organized opposition. The court could only decide upon the facts and evidence as presented, under the laws as it stands upon the statute books. The result may be seen in the following list of those granted, refused and otherwise disposed of.

Why Not?

Why not pass a law requiring every man who drinks liquor as well as those who sell it to take out a license? Let every one who wants the privilege of drinking come before the court with an application signed by six freeholders, together with his wife and children or other nearest relatives, stating that he is a man of "moral and temperate habits," that a certain amount of stimulants is necessary and good for him and will not work harm to himself his family or society. Then make [illegible] pay a license of $500 a year and hotels $1000, and we've got the liquor question by the throat. Very few under such a law would apply for a license to drink or could get one and the applications for a license to sell would be very rare. It would amount to as near prohibition as we will get in this generation. To be sure it would foster the sins of lying, deception, perjury and stealing but it would have a marked effect upon the liquor business. We make no charge for this idea, and are not particularly wedded to it, but simply throw it out as a suggestion.

CHILDREN'S SUITS—At Greenewalds', Bradford Pa.

Journalistic.

The Clinton Republican has entered upon its forty sixth year. It is one of the most healthy and robust weeklies in the state and is well and ably edited and conducted.

The Eldred Eagle has been enlarged and improved by the addition of a Portville department.

The Bradford Era has put on a partial new dress of type, changed its make-up, and commenced to advocate temperance. We are glad to witness these indications of prosperity and reformation.

Geo. E. Allen & Co. are making money out of the Bradford Star and building up a paying paper upon the wreck of the fortunes of its previous owners—all of which goes to show that George is a better financier and newspaper manager than his predecessors.

Haberstig is Ready

As will be observed by his advertisement in another column Haberstig, the popular and old established Bradford merchant tailor, is prepared with a full stock of spring goods to fill orders for old and new patrons. His trade in this section has probably been larger than that of any other merchant tailor in Bradford, and his goods and work have given general satisfaction. Before ordering that new suit call upon him and see what he has got and can do for you. He will be in Smethport with a full line of samples in about two weeks.

Pretty Cold.

The last [illegible] competitor made to say last week that the thermometer stood 25 degrees below zero Friday morning. It was a very cold morning, but a strict adherence to the truth compels us to say that the above estimate was very much exaggerated.

FALL CLOTHING—Greenewalds', Bradford.

A looker on at Washington says that Congressman Brown of this district bears a strong resemblance to the late President Garfield and that the similarity is noticed by all who visit the capitol.

Corrected Time Table.

The time table of the Rochester & Pittsburg railroad carefully corrected to date will be found in this issue. This road is rapidly taking position as one of the leading lateral lines of the country. Its construction and equipment is first class and its officials are noted for their efficiency and courtesy.

Union Lumber Company Limited

The above is the title of a company organized with headquarters in Buffalo, composed of the Allegany Lumber Company, Limited, J. J. Newman and Geo. D. Briggs. The purpose of the combination is to carry on an extensive lumber business on the waters of the Allegheny, and the general care and advancement of the lumber interests.

BOYS SUITS Greenewalds Bradford

An Extensive Business

Thos. R. Frisbee, the enterprising merchant of Coryville has about as much business on his hands as the head of a railroad syndicate. He runs a good gristmill and one of the best saw mills in this section of the country and in addition keeps one of the best stocked stores in the county. We are glad to know that his business and trade is rapidly increasing.

FALL OVERCOATS Greenewalds Bradford

A Needless Mishap

At about half past twelve Wednesday afternoon while the occupants of the offices in the court house and all out town were at dinner the supply of gas for some unknown reason suddenly shut off. In a short time it was turned on again the consequence being that in many cases where the valves had not been closed volumes of gas escaped. Such was the case in the court house boiler. Dennis Quinlan the janitor was at his dinner while all this was going on and when he returned went directly to the court room and commenced cleaning the room of the refuse left by the license applicants and their attorneys. Soon finding the room growing cold he visited the basement to ascertain the cause. Finding the fire out he at once closed the valves and after waiting a few minutes to let the escaped gas disappear he lit some paper and thrust it into the open door with his left hand. The thing was loaded. There was an immediate explosion throwing him to the ground burning his left hand and arm half way to the elbow very badly and severely scorching his face. His injuries are fortunately not serious but sufficiently severe to confine him to his house a few days and to learn him and all others that under the present superintendent the Smethport gas is perhaps not quite as dangerous as nitro glycerine.

The Citizen's Reform Association

The above is the title of an association of citizens organized in Bradford last evening with the object to secure by all proper means the strict enforcement of the laws and ordinances regulating the sale of intoxicating drinks. The association is composed of the leading citizens and is not confined to strict temperance men. The movement should and will meet with the aid and co-operation of all good citizens. Even the liquor dealers, those who have any regard for the law at least, can be expected to give all the aid in their power to the objects of the association. If the present liquor laws are enforced and all illegal and unlawful traffic can be prevented much good in the way of temperance reform will be accomplished. There is an abundant limit to the sale under the law and it is to be hoped that the C. R. A. is thoroughly in earnest and will prosecute every violator of the law without fear or favor. If not, the sooner it disbands the better.

The Lion and Lamb lie Down together

A correspondent at Wellsville writes: A good joke has leaked out from Belmont at last, given on the authority of a lawyer who took it in from an adjoining room. Editor Barnes of the Wellsville Reporter said some harsh things in his paper about ex Sheriff Joe Gillies, of Angelica. Gillies sued Barnes for libel and the trial was to occur at the recent term of court at Belmont. Both were in attendance at court. The hotels were crowded and when Gillies inquired for a room about midnight he was directed to a certain room where he was told he would find a place to sleep. The room contained three beds. The first was occupied by two men, the second contained a very large man and as Gillies is also large he passed on to the third bed. This was occupied by one man, much smaller than the one in the other bed and with him Mr. Gillies decided to sleep. He disrobed himself, pulled back the cover and discovered Barnes. With an exclamation referring to the lower regions he dropped the cover, donned his garments and left the room much to the relief of Editor Barnes and the amusement of the other occupants of the room.

A Vote of Thanks.

At a regular meeting of McKean post 347, G. A. R. department of Pennsylvania, held at their post room on Thursday evening Feb'y 27 1884 the following resolution was adopted:

That the thanks of this post are tendered to Bradford post 141 G. A. R. department of Pennsylvania for the generous treatment and excellent entertainment of post 347 at their camp fire on the evening of February 26 1884 and our heartfelt thanks are hereby tendered them for the same. By order

Decrease in Dram-Drinking.

The consumption of spirits in the United States is discussed by Rev. Dr. D. Dorchester in a recent issue of the New York Independent, with the conclusion that the average per capita consumption was five gallons a head sixty years ago, and not over two gallons a head now. Temperance advocates will probably be amazed at this conclusion, but no intelligent student of the progress made in the last sixty years in restricting the evils of whisky drinking will be surprised at this assertion; agreeing, as it does, with all that is known on the subject of American dram-drinking. In the last sixty years the production of spirits has not grown so rapidly as our population, the use of alcohol in the arts has increased enormously, and the consumption per adult for drinking purposes is probably much less than half what it was two generations ago.

Dr. Dorchester rests his case chiefly on the records of New England towns, whose consumption of rum at the opening of the temperance agitation was something frightful, and is probably not to be equalled to-day in the worst slums of our worst cities. Fitchburg, Mass., in 1825 consumed three and one-half gallons to a person. Dudley, in 1826, six, Shrewsbury five and Wilbraham four. In Connecticut, every family made way with twenty nine and one-half gallons of rum a year, and Fairfield in 1813 disposed of six and one third gallons to a person. These places were all small villages of 1400 to 2000 inhabitants, but the cities were no better off. Troy, population 10,000, consumed 73,050 gallons in 1820, and Boston and New York had, relatively, and the first absolutely, more places where liquor is sold than to-day. The Boston Recorder in 1823, put the national consumption in drink at 75,000,000 gallons annually, at least twice what it is to-day, with five times the population.

The cause of this decrease is probably due in not unequal shares to the influence of the temperance agitation and the progress of beer drinking, but whatever its cause incalculable misery has been saved by the change in the habits of the American people—a change whose parallel may be sought in vain the world over and which stands a significant proof of the self control fostered by free institutions.

Why Did He Get There?

A self styled liberal lecturer ex Rev. Charles B. Reynolds will deliver a lecture in Wagner's opera house in Bradford next Sunday evening upon the subject "Why I Left the Pulpit." He claims to have preached twenty years, delivering his last sermon last April. After reading the exposition of his present views it is no wonder that he left the pulpit but it is strange that he ever got there. But then Satan is supposed to have hung around Paradise a long time before he was cast out.

In the Field

A correspondent writing from Williamsport to the Harrisburg Patriot states that Robert M. Foreman is formally in the field as a candidate for the republican nomination for congressman this fall. If Mr. Brown is not a candidate for renomination, and the candidate is conceded to Lycoming a great many republicans of this county would like to see Hon. C. McCormick of Williamsport the choice. He created an excellent impression while in this county a year ago last fall as a contestant for the nomination before the congressional conference.

Raise Your Own Fish

There is scarcely a farmer in the county who could not at small expense, fix up a good fish pond and raise sufficient fish for his own use and plenty for market. The carp is the best fish for ponds and they can be obtained of the government free of cost, by securing the endorsement of the member of congress from the district.

High Prices.

A correspondent writes the Meadville Star from Tucson, Arizona, and in anything but a favorable strain. Prices on everything are very high. A suit of clothes costs $75, postoffice box $8 a year, haircut 50cts, physician's prescription $3, a bucket of good spring water 10 cents. The houses are one story adobes, which let in the rain and two persons pay $5 a week for a very poor lodging place.

Very Lucid

The Olean Democrat states that Geo. Gordon was acquitted of the murder of Major Graham in the McKean county courts, that Gordon owned a dog and Graham a bear, about which the men got into a fight in a saloon resulting in the death of Graham! Has there been a flood in Olean?

The Poor Farm

Sheriff Wilcox's farm about a mile from the borough, Gardner Barrett's farm about three miles and the Reilly farm now owned by Mrs. Taylor, have been mentioned as eligible poor farms. Arch Stephens says he will sell his farm and that it is a most excellent poor farm for he will guarantee any man to remain poor who will undertake to get a living from it.

Important Notice

There are yet outstanding accounts due me for subscription, advertising and job work up to January 1 1884 to the amount of $2,000 or over. Every dollar of this is justly due me and must be paid. If I could have stolen the paper, ink &c and cheated my employees out of their salaries I could possibly afford to lose or give away these accounts. But I couldn't—or at least didn't. Having no expectation or desire to be able to escape payment of any just debts myself, I must insist that these accounts owing me shall be paid as soon as possible. I hope every man or woman knowing themselves to be so indebted will consider this paragraph personal to themselves and will call at once to see "the man who wrote that piece" and get satisfaction, in other words a receipt in full signed by H. L. BARBOUR.

DIED.

COLWIN—At Smethport Pa., March 2, 1884 of [illegible] of the brain Harry L., son of George M. and Adda L. Colwin, aged one year two months and two days.

The intelligence of the death of this little fellow will be received with universal sorrow and regret. He was an uncommonly bright promising and beautiful child. His winsome ways made for him a large place in the home and in the hearts of his friends. It did not seem that little Harry could be taken away, but He who is wiser than man and who knows what is best for His poor creatures has seen fit to take him to Himself in heaven. From the sin and sorrow of life, its temptations and pain, the little fellow has been taken to heaven.

Safe in the arms of Jesus
Safe on His loving breast
There by His love o'er shaded,
Sweetly his soul shall rest.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY VIRTUE OF A WRIT OF LEVARI FAcias issued out of the Court of Common Pleas of McKean county, and to me directed I shall expose to public sale on the premises below described, on MONDAY, MARCH 24th 1884, at 10 o'clock a. m.

All the defendant's interest in and to all that certain water well and leasehold estate situate in Foster township, McKean county, and state of Pennsylvania, being a part of the Melvin farm and bounded and described as follows: It being a tract of land forty feet square surrounding the water well now owned by the Kendall Water Works, so-called, said square to be formed by using the well as a center and running a line parallel with road and twenty feet distant from the well and between it and road and opposite to said line drawn parallel with the road on the other side of the well run an other line parallel thereto, said line to extend far enough so that two lines drawn one on each side of the well and 20 feet distant therefrom and at right angles to said lines drawn parallel with road will form a square and each of said sides will measure forty feet. It is fully understood and agreed that if the said forty feet square does not include land enough to take in the boiler house as it stands now at said water well then it is to extend far enough to include the land now occupied by said buildings.

ALSO—One boiler house and service pipes connected with the Kendall Water Works situate on said leasehold property and connected therewith, together with all machinery and fixtures thereon, one [illegible] steam pump, one 250 barrel tank and one 1000-barrel tank, —— feet of tubing, —— feet of casing, —— feet of sucker rods, engine, house, derrick and all tools thereon and all and singular the appurtenances thereto belonging.

Seized, taken in execution and will be sold as the property of G. W. D. Judd at the suit of E. F. Duffee.

A lady wants to know if a lover can be called a suitor if he doesn't suit her.

A case of much interest—when you borrow of your uncle at the sign of the three balls.

To all mankind death is but a question of time; with women, however, the length of life is simply a question of veracity.

"I never shot but three men in my life," said a gentleman. "Then," replied a bystander, "you didn't remain long at Hot Springs."

A Virginia girl married a tramp who turned out to be a duke. We are sorry for her. She should have known what he was before she married him.—Boston Post.

Two tramps met upon the highway. One was evidently lame. The following conversation ensued: "Lame?" "Yes." "Dog?" "No." "Bull?" "Yes."—N. Y. Journal.

"Yes," said the boy, "I might just as well be at the head of the class as not. But I don't mind being at the foot, and the other boys do, so I sacrifice myself."—Boston Post.

A facetious swell who danced with a couple of Chicago girls at a party recently, remarked that, although he liked rings on his fingers, he couldn't stand belles on his toes.

Hostess: Why, how strange! I am sure my husband told me that you were a Bohemian.

Nervousness.

The moment there is danger of impairment of the mind from excessive nervous exhaustion, or where there exists forebodings of evil, a desire for solitude, shunning and avoiding company, vertigo and nervous debility, or when insanity has already taken place, BROWN'S should be implicitly relied on. But it is never well to wait so long before treatment is commenced. The early symptoms are loss of strength, softness of the muscles, dim or weak sight, peculiar expressions of the face and eyes, coated tongue, with impaired digestion, or in others certain powers only are lost, while they are otherwise enjoying comparatively good health. In all these BROWN'S should at once be taken.

Where Sullivan's Nerves Failed Him.

John L. Sullivan sat near a miner while on a train between Helena and Garrison. The miner had with him a small flask of whisky. He was traveling alone and wanted a drink. He pulled out the flask and said:

"Mr. Sullivan, will you take a few lines?"

"No," said Sullivan, with an offensive emphasis, "I don't drink."

"I hope you'll excuse me," said the young man, "I meant no offense."

"You shouldn't be so fresh," was the reply; "you shouldn't talk to men you don't know."

Soon after the young man took another drink, and in a spirit of levity, asked the champion a second time to take a drink, but did so in a very respectful manner.

"You're a cur," said Sullivan, "and I'll throw you out of the window."

Attempting to suit the action to the word, Sullivan rose, and was about to take hold of the man with the bottle when, quick as a flash, the latter put his hand to his hip pocket, and resolutely facing the champion, said, "You ——— ———, you may be the champion of the world, but you can't run this territory nor bully me. If you put me out of that window I'll put six bullets into you while you're doing it."

Sullivan at once resumed his seat, and McCoy and others interfered to prevent any further disturbance. McCoy explained the matter to the young man by stating that Sullivan had just lost his hat and overcoat off the train, and he was angry at the loss.

Stock Growers

All agree that for general use in their business no powder is better calculated to give satisfactory results than those prepared by S. M. Parmelee, because they really contain the valuable remedies claimed, and do not fail to act quickly and effectively in coughs, colds, epizootic, bad blood, stoppage of water, and poor digestion, &c., in horses. For cattle, hogs, sheep, poultry, they are invaluable. Full pounds only 25 cents. Sold by A. B. Armstrong.

Let There be Light.

Harper's Bazar.

An old-time clergyman, of Eastern Connecticut, was very quick at repartee. Once, when on an exchange, he was annoyed to find the room so dark, and beckoning to a person near the pulpit, he asked him to open the blinds and let in more light. "We expect light from you," exclaimed the gentleman. "But I must get it from heaven first," was the quick rejoinder.

GENERAL SCOTT'S WRATH.

What He Said to a Private—Dazzled in His Rage.

Washington Letter to Philadelphia Record.

An old army friend of mine who remembered General Winfield Scott as a tall, fine-looking old man, with white hair, a strict martinet, with a good head and a big heart, gives me a story or two about him. In his latter years General Scott was very irascible. A great many people knew that, but few knew that he was always sorry for a hasty word. While he was at the head of the army, with his office on Seventeenth street, just opposite the war department, he was coming out one day to enter his carriage, cane in hand. A volunteer orderly, who knew nothing of Scott's views of military propriety, approached him with a letter from a war department bureau, which he had been directed to deliver to General Scott at once. The orderly, reckoning nothing of adjutants general or chiefs of staffs, interpreted his order literally, and hastily giving a careless salute, began: "Oh, General, here's a paper I want you to look at before you—." For a moment the proud commander-in-chief seemed petrified. Then raising his cane, he said in a low voice, "Clear out, sir; clear out of the way." The startled orderly sprang to one side, and the general got into the carriage and was driven away. The soldier then delivered his letter to some one in the office and walked slowly out. General Scott's carriage had not gone thirty rods before it stopped and turned about. The driver, raising his voice, summoned the offending orderly to the door. Trembling in every limb, cap in hand, he approached. General Scott asked his name and regiment. He gave them. "Well, sir," said the general, "report to your colonel that you were guilty of gross disrespect to General Scott as an officer, and that General Scott was guilty of gross disrespect to you as a man. General Scott begs your pardon. Go to your duty, sir."

In 1861 a lady passing the season here was very anxious to get General Scott's autograph. He was very busy, and she found it very difficult. One day the happy thought struck her that her little 10-year old daughter might be able in this case to do what she herself could not. So she sent the charming little girl to the general's office with the album. The orderly told her that she could not see the busy general. She would not be denied. She would wait, she said. At the end of half an hour the orderly took her request to the adjutant. The latter admitted her, but told her she could not possibly see the general. She said she must. At last the adjutant showed her the door leading to General Scott's office, and told her she could get in if she dared. Taking him at his word, she marched right in. This is her description of the call given at the time: "I was afraid at first when he looked up, but as soon as he saw it was only me he said right pleasantly, 'Well, little girl, what do you want?' and I told him my ma wanted him to write his name in her book; and he looked sharp at me and asked me who my ma was, and I told him, and I told him my pa was in the army, and my ma was all alone, and then he just took out his pen and wrote in ma's book, and said good morning to me, and I came out and nobody didn't hurt me at all." This is what he wrote: "Treason is the greatest crime.—Winfield Scott."

Just one more. On Saturday afternoon in the summer before Scott left the army forever, President Lincoln with some friends sat on the balcony at the rear of the White House, listening to the music of the Marine band, when General Scott was announced. The president immediately advanced to meet him, and returned with the lieutenant-general, in full uniform, on his arm. The crowd on the lawn saw the president and the white-haired veteran, stopped talking, looked at the pair for a moment, and then broke forth into applause. The general at once stepped to the front and raised his hat in acknowledgment. The band very appropriately played "Hail to the Chief," while the crowd continued the clapping of hands. "You've got a good many young generals, Mr. President," said the old hero, turning to Lincoln, "but they don't forget the old general yet, do they?" "We could spare a hundred of them," said the President, helping the general to a seat, "better than him." "I thank you, Mr. President; I thank you," and the general with tears in his eyes.

A Remarkable Case.

DR. HARTMAN: Dear Sir—I am inducted by a sense of duty to the suffering to make a brief statement of your remarkable cure of myself. I was a most miserable sufferer from the various annoyances and distressing diseases, which caused me to be confined to my bed for a long time, being too weak to bear my weight upon my feet. I was treated by the most reputable physicians in our city and found all saying they could not do anything for me. I had given up all hope of ever being well again. In this condition, I began to take your PERUNA, and am most happy to say in three months I was perfectly well, entirely cured without any appliances or support of any kind. Yours truly,

MRS. HENRY ELLIS,

302 Scott street, Milwaukee, Wis.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, has unearthed a giant who is considered competent to stand Sullivan's punishment. His backers have challenged Sullivan, the stakes to be anything from $1,000 to $5,000 a side, and the contest to be with hard gloves. The Ohio man is said to be a prodigy. If he wins the battle, in spite of Pendleton's defeat and the monopoly millstone which is slowly but surely drowning Payne in the sea of presidential "possibilities," there will be a reasonable hope for Ohio's success in the democratic convention. The knocking out of Sullivan is all that is required to make the glory and renown of the Buckeye state complete.

Rheumatic Syrup Co:

It is with pleasure I write you in regard to Rheumatic Syrup. I think it my duty to let the suffering public know what it has done for me. I have suffered greatly two years with rheumatism in my hip. I have tried many liniments but receive no benefit from them. Being acquainted with a number who had been cured by the Rheumatic Syrup, I gave it a trial, and I am cured after using but four bottles. I know the Syrup will cure any case of rheumatism, if taken as directed, as hundreds will testify to in this immediate vicinity. I am gratefully yours,

JOHN P. FOWLER,

Justice of the Peace.

Pimples, blotches, sores or scaly eruptions on any part of the body can be cured by the use of Rheumatic Syrup, which cleanses the system and blood of all impurities, and builds up the debilitated system and gives new life to the feeble and overworked sufferer.

Blood! Blood! Blood!

It is necessity to all animal life, and to be free from disease the blood must be pure. There is no doubt that Parmelee's Blood Purifier excels in the driving out of all impurities and building up the system by making new blood, thus preventing the disorders so common, of sores, ulcers, boils, humors, pimples, Erysipelas, &c. Do not wait but prevent them by a free use of the purifier. Large bottles $1. Sold by A. B. Armstrong.

Lincoln's Captain.

From the Blue and Gray.

Jack Williams was a brave sergeant of a regiment which, undrilled and undisciplined, had joined the Army of the Potomac just as the terrible campaign of 1864 began. Before the army reached Petersburg Jack commanded his company, the captain and lieutenants having been killed. His gallantry was so conspicuous that he was recommended for a captaincy in the regular army. Ordered before an examining board at Washington, Jack presented himself, dressed in a soiled, torn uniform, with bronzed face and uncut beard. The trim, dapper officers composing the board had never been under fire or roughed it in the field, but they were posted in tactics and in the theory of war. Though shocked at Jack's unsoldierly appearance, they asked him all sorts of questions about engineering, mathematics, ordnance, and campaigns. Not a single question could Jack answer.

'What is an echelon?' asked one of the board.

'Don't know,' answered Jack.

'What is an abatis?'

'Never saw one.'

'A redan?'

'You fellows have got me again,' replied Jack.

'Well, what is a hollow square?'

'Never heard of one before, guess they don't have them down at the front, do they?'

'What would you do, sir, if you were in command of a company and cavalry should charge on you?' asked a lisping fellow in white kids.

'Do, you fool,' thundered Jack; 'I would give them Hail Columbia—that's what I'd do.'

This ended the examination; and the report of questions and answers, with the adverse judgment of the board, was sent to President Lincoln.

His private secretary read the report to him, and, when he came to the only answer that Jack had given, the President said:

'Stop! read that over again.'

'That's just the sort of men our army wants!' said the President, taking the report and dipping his pen in the inkstand. On the back of the paper he wrote in a clear hand:

Give this man a captain's commission.

A. LINCOLN.

BEATEN BY WIND AND RAIN.

Sailors on the Sea and Laborers on the Land—Help for the Larboard Watch.

"There is no telling the force of the wind; and the height and rush of the sea was simply appalling. When Cormeh, the boatswain, and myself came down from aloft, after furling the main-royal, we were wet through and half dead from the hard toil and the exposure."

So said the mate of the "Grosvenor," when relating the incidents of an Atlantic cyclone, after nearly all the crew had mutinied and left the ship in hope to escape [illegible].

Mechanics who labor upon lofty buildings: carpenters, masons, painters and bricklayers, may be called a kind of shore sailors, and that their numbers are not more largely decimated by accident and disease is a marvel. Mr. J. [illegible], tack pointer, house painter, etc., of No. [illegible] Madison street, Chicago, over a pipe and an [illegible], said to your correspondent:

"No, I am only a young man yet—thirty-five, that is; but the kind of work I do tells on a fellow's looks and constitution. Last spring I was about run down with over-work and exposure. I had to give up doing any work myself, and just made out to oversee my men in a sort of half-and-half way. I thought I was played out for good and all. I was racked with a cough, coupled with a cold, and torn and disabled with rheumatism. But I took PARKER'S TONIC and it cured me. These three words tell the whole story—it cured me."

To all persons subject to risk from exposure, PARKER'S TONIC will commend itself. It purifies the blood, incites the torpid liver to a healthy activity, and opens the pores of the skin. This is the secret of out-door perils to health. Keep the Tonic near you. Prices, 50 cents and $1 a bottle. HISCOX & CO., Chemists, New York.

DOWNS' ELIXIR.

Vegetable Balsamic

ELIXIR

This valuable medicine is purely vegetable; the discovery of which was the result of many years' close study, in order to discover the causes, the symptoms, and the cure—viz: Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Croup, Asthma, Pleurisy, Hoarseness, Influenza, Spitting Blood, Bronchitis, and every species of oppression of the Chest and Lungs. In all cases where this Elixir has been duly administered its efficacy has been invariably manifested, convincing the most incredulous that is not incurable, if properly attended to.—Consumption, at its commencement, is but a slight irritation of the membrane which covers the Lungs; then an inflammation, when the cough is more observable, but rather dry; then becomes local fever and the pulse more frequent, the cheeks flushed and chills more common. This Elixir in curing the above complaints, operates so as to remove all morbid irritations and inflammation from the lungs to the surface, and finally expel them from the system. It facilitates expectoration.

It heals the ulcerated surfaces and relieves the cough and makes the breathing easy. It supports the strength and at the same time reduces the fever. It is free from strong opiates and astringent articles, which are of so drying a nature as to be in great danger of destroying the patient; whereas this medicine never dries or stops the cough, but, by removing the cause, generally destroys the hectic before the cough is entirely gone. Consequently, when the cough is cured the patient is well. Send address for pamphlet giving full directions for cure of pulmonary diseases. Price 35 cts., 50 cts., and $1.00 per bottle.
